HERE

Rachel Grecco

Why are we always running?
What are we chasing? When the grace and beauty are already here.

It surrounds you every second,
Since the day you were born. Though sometimes it hides, it's always here.

It could be the smallest dewy drop on a rose petal,
On a puppy's wet nose, just let your eyes pier.
It could be the windy breeze,
Of a cold winter's day, by the beach or the bay, feel it my dear.

It could be the echoing songs,
Of chirping birds, the staticky car radio, just open your ears.

It could be the slight sniff,
Of the mulchy woods, a baker's brick oven, onion for a tear.

Well it's the sensations we fear, the life we try to steer, when it's all right here.

The future is a concept,
The present is all we have, you exist in the now, so bring your mind here.
