Biographies

OLIVIA BARDO is a senior English major with minors in Politics and Gender Studies. She is a lover of stories and a baker of bread. After graduation, she will be serving in a year-long fellowship at Sojourners Magazine in D.C.

JENNA BECKER is a junior English major at Messiah University. She is a Chinese American, born in China and raised by her adoptive mother in America. Beyond the basic introductory pleasantries, she is an aspiring creator, investigator, teacher, healer and learner- or in short- a writer. She is a voice with a cadence that wanes with the wind. She is a voice with the resilience of a hurricane.

MOLLY MCKIM is a sophomore English major and Digital Humanities minor. Her favorite part of being in the humanities is discovering new ways to interpret language and perspective.

CAMRYN WIMBERLY is a sophomore English major with minors in Spanish and Digital Public Humanities. Outside of her academic work, Cam enjoys reading and writing all kinds of work, especially poetry. Additionally she is very passionate about mental health advocacy, which she explores through her mental health awareness blog.
