LOCUST POINT

William Stowman

The water runs cool in the valley

At that place

Where the stream

Passes the old stone wall

This wall, that once stood in great company

Joined with hearth and timber

And the glow of candles

Keeping good things in and bad things out

Winter wind and summer breeze

carry away time

And with it

The voices of the past

At this crossroads

A fertile ground holds the deep roots

Of tall trees

That shelter memories
